LOCAL MASONS CELEBRATE 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Gleichen Lodge No. 36 on the Register of the Grand Lodge of Alberta celebrated the 25th anniversary of the giving of its charter. Masons from Milo, Queenstown, Arrowwood, Rosebud, Standard, Strathmore and Calgary gathered for the occasion and seventy-five sat at table.

The business of the lodge was rapidly dispatched and all gathered about the banquet table where Rt. Wor. Bro. T. H. Beach presided. Three of the charter members were present, Wor. Bro. A. R. Yates, Very Wor. Bro. Duncan McBean and Bro. W. F. Durston. A letter from Wor. Bro. Stocken was read expressing his regret at not being able to be present. Wor. Bro. James Black led the community singing and Bros. Egleson, Lewis and Brown provided instrumental music.

A short history of the early days was given by Bro. A. R. Yates. In the early part of 1907 a meeting was called in the Bank of Commerce for the purpose of organizing a lodge. Those present were, Revs. H.W.G. Stocken and C. Peck, Messrs. A. R. Yates, W. B. McLeod, Duncan McBean, Isaac Smith, A. E. Ferman, W. F. Durston, James Craig and Dr. Sheets. The charter was given on October 31, 1907 and the officers of the first lodge were W. M. Rev. H. W. Stocken; S. W., A. R. Yates; J. W., W. B. McLeod; Chaplain, Rev. C. Peck and secretary, I. Smith. During those early days W. Ferguson and Capt. Gordon, of Strathmore, gave great assistance to the lodge.

At first the meetings of the lodge were held in the old Gleichen Hotel and many humorous incidents of those early days were recalled.

Later the lodge met in the Larke Block and they had just nicely moved above the store of T. H. Beach when the building burned and all records lost. It was not till 1916 that the present building was acquired.

Duncan McBean recalled incidents of those early days and contrasted them with the present prosperous condition of the lodge. He felt that their labors had been exceedingly abundant and that the lodge had surpassed the most glowing hopes for those early days.

W. F. Durston was too far away to take a very active part in the management of the lodge and he recalled some of the trips across the open prairie and for some reason roads have a kind of a nightmare for him.

Just before closing Rev. Bro. House gave a brief and illuminating talk on the apron. Shortly after midnight came the call for the Junior Warden's toast and all felt that a landmark in Gleichen's history had been passed.

HE DIED FROM ???

During a man's sojourn on earth of three score and ten years it is recorded of him. He ate:

150 head of cattle.

225 lambs.

26 sheep.

310 swine.

2400 chickens.

26 acres of wheat.

6 acres of sundry fruits.

He drank of sufficient drinks to make a great lake and in warming himself and preparing his food he used the substance of 150 great big trees.

He slept for 25 years, the remainder of his days of pilgrimage was apportioned as follows:

He spent three years and six months in eating and drinking.

Three years in dressing and undressing.

Two years and six months in going to and from his work.

Thirteen years and nine months in study.

Ten years and three months in amusing himself.

The remaining 22 years of his life he worked and thereby earned the wherewithal to do all the above things.

LOCAL FLOUR MILL NOW WORKING TO CAPACITY

The Call is glad to learn that the Gleichen Flour Mill is a very busy place these days. Owing to the increased business it has been necessary to start a night shift a short time ago so that the mill is now running twenty-four hours a day. From this it is evident that Beau Ideal Flour and other products of the mill is finding an ever increasing market for its products which range from flour to breakfast foods also products for stock. Last week a car of flour was shipped to Beiseker and large orders have been received from Bassano, Carleton Place and Queenstown.

Many farmers haul grain to the mill to be ground and many from the following places were noted at the mill: Strathmore, Namaka, Carleton Place, Chancellors, Arrowwood, Cluny, Makepiece, Gem Colony, Milo and Queenstown.

Beau Ideal Flour has become favorably known in all these points and the mill has recently been asked to quote prices as far west as Nelson, B. C. All this shows that Beau Ideal Flour is becoming known as one of the best as those who have used it speak in very flattering terms of its baking qualities.

A visit to the mill these days is worth your while. To see the amount of flour and other product that are turned out each day must convince everyone that having an industry of this kind in our midst has not only helped our town but has made it possible for our farmers to realize much more for their grain than by selling it outright in the usual way.

The fact that farmers from distant points are bringing in their grain must eventually bring more business both to the town itself but to the surrounding districts as well. This being the case it is up to the citizens themselves to patronize the mill in every possible way and by using the flour and recommending it to their neighbors, they will be boosting this very valuable local industry. The milling methods are of the most modern type and their products compare favorably with any of the larger mills both in quality and price. It is not sentiment that has increased business so much lately for this mill but it is the high quality of flour manufactured from the wheat grown in this country.

The local flour mill is an institution, which not only creates work in many ways, but it creates business in many ways for the community. Farmers like to trade with a local mill while many others come in for flour and other products, and while in town they make other purchases. This flour mill is a real asset in this regard but to be a greater asset it must be supported by the people of the town.

A SOFT JOB

Most any man can be an editor. All the editor has to do is to sit at a desk six days a week, four weeks a month twelve months a year and edit such stuff as this:

"Joe Doe climbed on the roof of his house last week looking for a leak and fell landing on his back porch."

"While Harold Green was escorting Miss V. Wise from the church social last Saturday night, a savage dog attacked them and bit Mr. Green on the public square."

ONE YEAR SPENT IN THE MAKING OF "SKY DEVILS"

A picture that took a year in the making and cost more than a half million dollars is "Sky Devils" which Howard Hughes, who made the famous spectacle, "Hell's Angels," is offering as the first comedy of the "Sky Devils" is a lightning-fast comedy, based on the thrilling and romantic adventures of three American aviators during the World War. The leading roles are played by Spencer Tracey, William Boyd, George Cooper and Ann Dvorak.

This is Producer Hughes' first comedy production since "Two Arabian Knights," a box office sensation of four years ago. "Sky Devils" contains more laughs than the dough-boy opus, and in addition, is full of air scenes as spectacular as the most thrilling moments in "Hell's Angels."

An air fleet of 55 planes was used in filming the sensational flying scenes in "Sky Devils" and in one sequence alone 50 ships are shown in thrilling combat above the clouds.

It is an audacious tale of three flying clowns who violate every rule of war to have a good time, and in the face of court-martial for disobedience accomplish so many rare and accidental feats of gallantry they are decorated for their impertinent exploits.

The story of "Sky Devils," which comes to the Gleichen Community Hall next Saturday night, November 19th, has many unusual twists, and the dialogue sparkles with humor. It moves at a terrific tempo, from start to finish, and piles laugh upon laugh, and thrill upon thrill, as the action unrolls on the screen.

What The Census Tells.

Statistics are generally regarded as dry and uninteresting, but to those who make a study of them as they relate to matters of vital importance to the welfare of the human family they become of absorbing interest. In fact, a knowledge and understanding of the statistical position of many matters are essential to a true grasp of such matters, and where it is possible to present such information to people in the form of charts and graphs they tell a story which mere words could never convey.

Within recent months the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, which, by the way, is one of the best organized and most efficient departments of the Ottawa public service, has issued a large number of bulletins presenting the facts ascertained in the decennial census-taking last year, and which are worthy of study and consideration by the Canadian people. They indicate what progress has been made, where it has been made, and wherein as a people we have slipped a bit backward, or remained stationary.

Some things stand out as worthy of note. We learn, for example, that Canada's population increased by 1,588,837 in the ten year period, 1921-31, or slightly over 18 per cent., which is 2 per cent. higher than the United States, a very healthy and substantial growth, and that the four Western provinces continued proportionately to increase in numbers more rapidly than the five Eastern provinces. Not so satisfactory from the standpoint of the nation as a whole is the disclosure that whereas the population of our cities, towns and villages increased by 1,219,936, or 28 per cent., our rural population only increased by 368,901, or slightly over 8 per cent., with the result that whereas our rural population in 1921 exceeded the urban by 83,000, the urban now exceeds the rural by over 767,000.

It is interesting, too, to learn that of Canada's total population of 10,376,786, no less than 8,069,258, or 77 1/2 per cent., are native born Canadians, while a further 1,844,830, or 11 1/2 per cent., were born elsewhere under the British flag, leaving less than 11 per cent. of other than British birth.

Classified by religious denominations, the fact emerges that Roman Catholics constitute the largest single denomination with 4,098,546 adherents, the United Church coming second with 2,016,897, Anglicans third with 1,635,321, and Presbyterians fourth with 870,482. Not one of the remaining 27 denominations listed reach 500,000.

Canada's population consists of 5,374,541 males and 5,002,245 females, and the number of males predominate in every one of the nine provinces. There are, of course, more single than married persons, because of the large number of children, but the percentage of single to married is steadily decreasing, single persons constituting only 57.35 per cent. of the population in 1931, as compared with 61.67 per cent. in 1921, while married persons increased from 34.13 per cent. in 1921, to 38.27 per cent. in 1931. The number of widowed remained about the same, but the number of divorced rose from 661, or .01 per cent. in 1921, to 7,441 or .07 per cent. in 1931.

When we turn to the bulletin on the literacy of the people, a most encouraging picture is presented. It shows that a steadily increasing percentage of our people five years of age and over can both read and write, and taking Canada as a whole no less than 92.34 per cent. can do so compared with 90.00 per cent. only ten years ago. That this progress will be continued is made evident by the statistics of school attendance which reveals the encouraging fact that, whereas the increase in population between the ages of 5 and 24 years in the ten year period, 1921-1931, was 19.60 per cent., the percentage increase at school was 25.82 per cent. Better than one out of every five persons living in Canada is attending school.

Analysing the economic position so far as agriculture is concerned, it is revealed that, were it not for substantial increases in many departments in the three prairie provinces, Canada would have had to report a decided slipping back during the past ten years. There are, for example, 336,000 fewer horses on Canadian farms than in 1921, but this is accounted for by the introduction of automobiles and tractors. The number of cows in calf or in milk only increased by 281,000, and actually decreased in the Maritime provinces; other cattle were fewer in number by 642,000, every province except Quebec and British Columbia reporting decreases; sheep increased by 422,000, but again decreases took place in all provinces east of the Ottawa River; swine, on the other hand, showed the substantial increase of 1,343,000, only Nova Scotia and Ontario reporting small decreases; poultry jumped over 288,375,000 with all provinces sharing in the gain.

The number of farms in Canada is greater by 17,574 than ten years ago, there being fewer in the east and more in the west. Farms are also becoming larger, the average size in 1931 being 224 acres as compared with 198 acres in 1921. The acreage in occupied farms increased by 22,680,000 acres, while improved land in these occupied farms rose by over 15,000,000 acres.

On the other hand, the value of farm lands decreased by $984,409,709 and farm buildings by $41,371,300, all provinces reporting drops in land values, and the eastern provinces, except Prince Edward Island, decreases in value of buildings, while Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia reported increases.

There was, however, a marked improvement in farm comforts, conveniences and equipment, including automobiles, machinery of various kinds, gas and electric light, radios, telephones, water piped into farm homes, improvement in roads, and shortening of distances to market and railway towns.

Landscapes Take Time

Landscape architecture which will require 25 years to complete is being undertaken at Western University, London, Ontario. It is a reminder that landscapes are not made in a week or a month, although a few vandals with axes and saws can do much to destroy one in a single day.

A Lost Island

Scientists Searching For Tiny Dot Of Land In The Pacific

Sarah Ann, much to the consternation of the astronomical world, has disappeared and, it is feared, drowned. Just a pin-point freckle on the broad face of the Pacific, Sarah Ann was—and maybe is—the tiniest sort of an uninhabited island.

This Cinderella of the sea was last reported alive some 15 years ago. Then of no value to anyone and avoided by ship captains, she has become today a spot of great importance. If she can be located, many scientists want a date five years from now.

The reason for the sudden popularity arises from efforts to calculate the course of the 1937 eclipse.

It has been found that on June 28, 1937, the sun will be eclipsed totally by the moon for about seven minutes. In all the Pacific, Sarah Ann was the only reported spot of land suitable for observation in the 5,000-mile long, 120-mile wide band of totality.

Unless Sarah Ann can be found, it is possible a coral reef may be built up to island status for the seven minutes.

HER HAND FELT DEAD

Helpless With Rheumatism

At one time she thought she would lose the use of her right hand. But "a blessing"—in the form of Kruschen Salts—put her right again.

"I was sure in a bad state," she writes, "in fact, I could not do my housework, I was so bad with rheumatism in my arms and hands. I could not sleep at night, and had to get up and heat water to ease my pain and numbness. I took all kinds of medicines. I rubbed it and plastered it—but it was still there. I thought I would lose the use of my right hand. I could not hold anything, nor could I sew a button on. My arm would go dead. I was advised to try Kruschen, and inside of three weeks I found such a change. I have kept on taking it, and am so thankful for the blessings I have received in Kruschen. Now I sleep all night—thanks to Kruschen's help and relief."

(Mrs.) J. H.

The six salts in Kruschen stimulate the liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action; assist them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is the cause of all rheumatic suffering. When poisonous uric acid goes—along with its deposits of needle-pointed crystals—there's no doubt about those aches and pains going too!

A Retarding Influence

Rigid Economy When Not Necessary Does Much Harm

All over the province the high schools and collegiate institutes are trying to cut down expenses. In fact all over the province everybody is trying to cut down expenses, even those who have no reason at all for doing so. People who have their 1928 income are pinching like the rest. This reducing of expenses, this refraining from buying anything that can be done without retards the return of business activity. And yet a force like this operates inevitably and no argument can prevail against it.—Toronto Star.

Testing Wheat Samples

Meeting Held In Winnipeg Of National Research Council

The question of testing samples of hard red spring wheats, received for exhibition at the World Grain Exhibition to be held at Regina next year, was dealt with at the annual meeting of the associate committee on grain research of the National Research Council held in Winnipeg.

L. H. Newman, Dominion cerealist and chairman of the awards committee of the world show, introduced the question. After full discussion, it was decided milling and baking tests need only be applied to the limited number of exhibits remaining after other recognized methods of judging had been applied.

Various technical reports were delivered at the final session of the annual meeting and it was decided to meet in Winnipeg again in April, 1933.

Strange Survival Of Seeds

Flowers Grow First Year After Woodlands Are Cut

In this country and doubtless in others as well, whenever a wood on a hillside is cut down the following year that hillside is one blaze of foxgloves, though none was visible or existing when the wood was standing. When, as during the war, large woodlands were cut down the blaze of color, extending sometimes for miles, was a fine sight. Now comes the strange part. After so fine a crop of foxgloves one would expect a still finer crop the following year, but no, the succeeding year the crop is not more than half and in about half a dozen years they disappear altogether. Where do the original seeds come from? Have they lain dormant for a few centuries?—J. H. Howell in the London Times.

Saskatchewan Wheat Yield

Estimate Of Pool Elevators Places Crop At 204,282,000 Bushels

Based on reports of 1,044 of its agents throughout the province, Saskatchewan Pool Elevators, Limited, offered its estimate of the 1932 Saskatchewan wheat crop. The figure is 204,282,000 bushels.

This is substantially lower than the estimates of any other agency so far made public. It is over 13,000,000 bushels below the Winnipeg Free Press estimate for Saskatchewan, published on September 7, and 23,000,000 bushels below that of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, published on September 10.

The figure represents an estimate of wheat which will actually be delivered to country elevators in the province or loaded over the platform and in addition is included an allowance for back to farmers for seed, feed and other purposes.

Taking the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' estimate of 1932 acreage seeded to wheat in Saskatchewan, which is 15,543,000 acres (a figure used by other agencies), the yield per acre works out at 13.14 bushels.

As this production was made by more than 1,000 experienced observers after threshing was completed for the most part, the company believes that the opportunity for maximum accuracy was excellent. It considers, further, that the new figure bears out a wide-spread opinion that threshing returns in the province were not coming up to harvest expectations. The view that wheat production would prove lower than formerly anticipated, is confirmed in the present report.

The Pool elevators organization confirms its estimate to Saskatchewan.

Settlers Going North To Hard Conditions

Four Thousand Have Already Reached Fifty-Seventh Parallel

Two post offices have increased to eleven in two years around Notikewin, on the 57th parallel in northern Alberta. Rev. Harry E. Parker, a Winnipeg boy, who left postgraduate studies at Chicago to go pioneering there for the United Church in 1930, reported signs of growth and of need. Sixty-five miles from a railway, Notikewin today has two large stores, two restaurants, a pool room, a hardware store, large warehouses, a Roman Catholic Church and a United Church and manse. There was no village when Mr. Parker arrived.

In 1930 there were 400 people in the district, today 4,000, and the Sky Pilot is serving regularly 800 square miles, besides making one trip over the muskeg in winter to the Keg and Paddle River Prairies. Up there, says the missionary, is the real north where millions of acres await the plow.

Many of the families around Notikewin have nothing but ground wheat and potatoes to eat for months. He has found family after family almost naked. Their houses are of logs with pole and sod roofs.

There are Russians, Hungarians, Scandinavians, Poles, Americans, English, Irish, Scots and Canadians. There are the poorest European peasants and university graduates, all trying to carve out homes. If they arrive too late to raise garden stuff, they almost starve before spring. Some came in during September by covered wagon.

The missionary says he will need much clothing for these people this winter.

Unlimited Possibilities Are Seen By Detroit Physician

A Detroit physician with a flair for experimentation claims that he can glimpse the world of to-morrow through his X-ray machine.

Dr. Wile Kim Lim, a native of the island of Sumatra, spends most of his spare time gazing into the fluoroscope at various objects his fancy prompts him to place under the X-ray.

As a result of his experiments, he predicts the following:

That some day bank clerks will use the X-ray to detect fake money.

That scientists will use the X-ray to diagnose plant as well as animal diseases.

That manufacturers will X-ray alloys to be used in aeroplanes to detect flaws in the metal and thereby safeguard flying.

Will Hurt U.S. Trade

Economic Conference Agreements Will Affect American Exports

Export of food products from the United States to the United Kingdom will probably be affected to the tune of $180,786,065 annually by the agreements reached at the Imperial Economic Conference between the United Kingdom and the Dominions, says the Journal of Commerce, New York.

Pointing out the effect of the agreements on United States products is problematical and probably impossible to forecast with any degree of certainty. The paper states a compilation of export values of the foodstuffs affected for the past five years led to the above valuation.

"My husband says it's my prettiest dress"

"I want to tell you how I got acquainted with Diamond Tints," says a cordial letter from a Windsor woman. "I was in the drug store and saw some attractive Diamond Tint packages. The druggist told me they were for tinting light shades without boiling. He said they were made by the Diamond Dyes people. I have always used Diamond Dyes for dyeing dark colours and know they are the best dyes made. When I saw Diamond Tints I thought of a 2-year old dress which I had to quit wearing because it was so faded. I got a package and gave my dress the simple rinsing called for. It came out the loveliest shade—a lustrous, shimmering yellow. I have laundered it several times but have never had to retint. It certainly holds the colour. I'm perfectly delighted with my new dress, as I call it, and my husband says it's the prettiest one I have."

One Little Incident

Easy To Understand Why Prince Of Wales Is Popular

An article in the Christian Science Monitor says the Prince of Wales has replaced one retiring Scilly Island farmer with two unemployed Welsh miners and has sent an expert from his Duchy of Cornwall to teach them the intricacies of agriculture. Meanwhile, since they have been taken off the dole, he is paying them from his own pocket until their first crops are harvested. It is little incidents like this one that continue to send our estimate of His Royal Highness still higher.

Hint For the Housewife

Easy Way To Liquify Jam That Has Hardened

If jam left from a previous season has become hard and sugary it need not be thrown away or reserved exclusively for cooking purposes. Fill a large earthenware bowl with cold water, and, after removing the jam-pot covers, stand the pots in the cold water, placing the bowl in a fairly hot oven. After a time the jam will become liquid, and when it has cooled down it will be found that no hard lumps of sugar remain and the jam is as delicious as ever.

Many children die from the assaults of worms, and the first care of mothers should be to see that their infants are free from these pests. A vermicide that can be depended on is Miller's Worm Powders. They will not only expel worms from the system, but act as a health-giving medicine and a remedy for many of the ailments that beset infants, enfeebling them and endangering their lives.

Steam Engine For Aeroplane

New Type Of Flying Machine To Be Tested

Harold C. Johnston, proprietor of an Akron, Ohio, welding shop, opened the doors of his small plant and disclosed a steam aeroplane engine which he tuned up to 1,500 revolutions per minute.

Johnston a builder of his own aeroplane designs, said he had spent nine months in developing the engine after a "plane accident more than a year ago had caused him to seek a way of eliminating the fire hazard in aviation.

Weighing only 168 pounds, exclusive of the propeller, the engine will develop 62 horse-power.

The engine is to be installed within a few weeks in a small plane and flown to the Pacific Coast.

"My wife! She seems to have been oblivious of the fact—and to have wished me to be equally oblivious of it—for the last few years."

"Yes, of course she's been wrong, wickedly wrong. But that doesn't alter the fact that she's your responsibility, Blaise. You must take her back."

"Take her back?"—violently, "I'll be shot if I do. She's chosen to live her life without me for the last few years—she can continue to do so."

Jean laid her hand on his arm. She was smiling wistfully.

"Dear, you'll have to take her back," she persisted gently. "Don't you see—she's not wholly to blame? You've admitted that. You've blamed yourself in a large measure for her running away. It's up to you now to put things straight, to—to give her the chance she didn't have before."

"You're discounting these last few years," he returned gravely. "These years in which she has lived a life, allowing me to believe her dead—cheating and deceiving me as no man was ever cheated before. She's cheated me out of my happiness"—heavily—"taken you from me!"

"Yes, I know," Jean's voice quivered, but she steeled it again. "But even in that, she was not solely to blame. You've told me how—how weak she is and easily led away. And she's very young. What chance would Nesta have of asserting her will against her sister's, even had she wished to return to you? She ran —and it won't be easy, when I see in an evening the lights twinkle up at Staple, to know that you two are within, shut in from the world together, while I'm outside—always outside your life and your love."

"You'll never be outside my love," he said swiftly. "That's yours, now and forever. And no other woman shall rob you of one jot or tittle of it, were she my wife twenty times over. I will bring Nesta back to Staple, and she shall bear my name and live as my wife in the eyes of the world. But my love—that is yours, utterly and entirely. Yours and no other's."

She lifted her face to his, and their lips met in a kiss that was a seal of love and all love's faithfulness.

"So is mine yours," she said. "Now and forever, in this world and the next. Oh, Blaise—beloved!"—she clung to him in a passion of love and anguish and straining belief—"Some day, surely, in that other world, God will give us freedom to take our happiness!"

CHAPTER XXXIII. The Returning Tide

Two months had elapsed since Fate's dividing sword had fallen, for ever separating Jean from the man she loved, and the subsequent march of events, with the many changes involved and the bitter loneliness of soul entailed, had made the two months seem to her more like two years.

She had left Staple for Charnwood on the day following that of Madame de Varigny's visit. It was no longer possible for her to remain under the same roof with Blaise, where the enforced strain of meeting each other daily, and of endeavouring to behave as though nothing more than mere commonplace friendship linked them together, would have been too great for either of them to endure even for the few remaining days which still intervened before the date originally planned for her departure.

She watched with anxious eyes the progress of events at Staple. At the commencement of the new regime Nesta had appeared genuinely repentant and ashamed of her conduct in the past, and there was something disarming in the little, half-apologetic air with which she had at first reassumed her position of chateleine of Staple, deferring eagerly to Blaise on every point and trying her utmost to please him and conform to his wishes. It held something of the appeal of a forgiven child who tries to atone for former naughtiness by an almost alarming access of virtue.

She accepted with meek docility Blaise's decision regarding the purely formal relations upon which their married life was henceforth to be based, apparently humbly thankful to be reinstated as his wife on any terms whatsoever that he chose to dictate.

"I know I have been bad—bad," she declared, "to run away and leave you like that, I can't—forgive me—hope for you to love me again—"

And Tormarin had replied with unmistakable decision: "No, you can't hope for that. And I'm glad you understand and recognize the fact. Still, we can try to be good friends, Nesta, at least."

But this tranquil state of things only lasted for a comparatively short time. Very soon, as the novelty and satisfaction of her reinstatement began to wear off, Nesta became more self-assured and, apparently, considerably less frequently visited by spasms of repentance and remorse.

She found Blaise's cool, measured, elderly-brotherly kindness unendurable, and she exhausted herself beating continually against the rock of his determination, without producing any effect other than to make his manner even more austere, less friendly than it had been before.

For weeks he supported Nesta's petty gibes and ebullitions of temper with illimitable patience, and it was only when, trading on his unaccustomed forbearance, she ventured too far, that she was brought very suddenly to understand that there was a limit beyond which she might not go.

"I know why you no longer love me," she told him at last, on an occasion when she had been vainly endeavouring, by every feminine blandishment and wile of which she was mistress, to evoke from him some sign of an awakening "tendresse."

"I know!" She nodded her dark head significantly, while pin-points of jealous anger flickered in her long, narrow eyes, black as midnight.

"Then, if you know," replied Tormarin patiently, "it is surely most foolish of you to keep asking why I do not. Why can't you content yourself with things as they are, Nesta? We can only try to make the best of a bad job. You don't help me much in the matter."

"I don't want to help you," she retorted viciously. "I want you to love me. And you won't because of that washed-out-looking, carrot-haired woman who is living with you, too! . . . No! I won't be quiet! Oh!"—her voice rising hysterically—"You think I don't notice things, but I do. I do, I tell you!"

She sprang from the couch, where she had been loitering indolently amid a heap of cushions, and crossed the room to his side.

"Do you hear me?" she cried violently, shaking him by the arm. "You think I'm a blind fool! But I'm not! I'm not! I've seen that Peterson woman look at you like a cat looking through the ladder window."

Suddenly she felt Blaise's hand clapped against her lips, stemming the torrent of vulgar recrimination and abuse that poured from them. He held it there quite gently, so as not to hurt her, but immovably, and she had perforce to hear what he wished to say in rebellious silence.

"Listen to me," he said quietly. "It is quite true what you say—that I love Jean Peterson, and that she loves me. But we have given up our love, and with it our hope of happiness in this world, for you. In return, you will give up something for us. You will give up the infinite pleasure you appear to derive from vilifying and belittling a woman who is as much above you as the heavens are above the earth, whose conception of love is as fine and pure as yours is mean and commonplace and jealous. You will never again speak of Miss Peterson with anything but respect, nor will you ever again refer to the love which you now know for a fact exists between us. Your lips soil such love as ours. If you do, if you disobey my commands in either of these respects, you go out of my house that same day. And you don't return."

At the same time, unknown to him, she compelled Jean to pay for the silence enforced upon her at home. With a species of venom, absurdly childish in its manifestation, she essayed to excite Jean's envy by constantly enlarging to her upon the subject of Blaise's perfections as a husband, drawing entirely imaginary descriptions of the attention he paid her and of his constant solicitude for her welfare, and vaunting her happiness at being his wife.

This open declaration of hostility on Nesta's part gave Jean food for reflection. Briefly she recounted the incident to Claire, adding:

"It means I must not go to Staple again. If she intends to adopt that attitude, it would make a situation which is already quite difficult enough hopelessly impossible."

The two girls were pacing up and down the terrace at Charnwood together when Jean indicated the consequences of Nesta's visit, and Claire, sensing the pain in her friend's voice, pressed her arm sympathetically. But she said nothing. What was there to say? Within herself, she felt that Jean's determination to eschew the Tormarin ménage altogether was the only wise one.

"Poor Blaise!" pursued Jean, a slight tremor in her voice. "He has the hardest part to bear. She must make life hideously difficult for him." Claire nodded.

"Yes, he is looking fagged and strained. Horrid little beast!" she added with unusual vehemence. "Why on earth couldn't she have stayed dead?" Jean laughed joylessly.

"Why indeed?—Only she never really died, you see."

"Jean"—Claire's hand crept further along the other's arm and the kind little fingers sought and clasped Jean's own—"if you knew how miserable I am about you! It makes me feel wicked—disgustingly selfish and wicked!—to be so happy myself when you have so much to bear."

There were tears in her voice, and Jean squeezed her hand reassuringly.

"My dear," she said earnestly, "you had your black years if anyone ever had! If a woman ever deserved her happiness at last, you do. . . . I suppose we all get our share of trouble in this world," she went on thoughtfully. "I remember the first time I ever met Blaise—that day at Montevan, you know—he said that Destiny, with her snuffers, came to most of us sooner or later and snuffed out our light of happiness. Well"—rather dreamily—"I suppose it's my turn now and she's come to me. That's all."

Claire shivered. "Let's go in," she said. "It's growing too cold to stay out any longer. Besides, it's depressing. Grey skies, bare branches—Oh! How I detest the autumn!" They turned and retraced their steps to the house. As they entered by way of the front door, they caught a glimpse of the postman making his way briskly down the drive. A solitary letter lay upon the hall table, addressed to Jean in a rather florid copper-plate style of writing.

"A bill, I suppose!" she commented indifferently.

She picked it up carelessly, carrying it unopened to her room. Nor did she open it immediately upon arriving there, stopping first to remove her hat and coat.

When at last she slit the envelope she found that it was no tradesman's bill, as she had imagined, but a letter from Glyn Peterson's family solicitor, announcing, in the stiff phraseology without which no lawyer seems able to express himself, the sudden death of her father.

Jean sat down abruptly, her legs seeming all at once to give way under her, she could not grasp it—could not realize that the witty, charming personality which, after all, in spite of Peterson's lack of the more conventional paternal attributes, had meant a great deal to her, had been swept without warning out of her life forever.

Glyn Peterson had, it seemed, died very suddenly, in a remote corner of Africa whither his restless wanderings had led him, and it had been some weeks before the news of his death had reached his lawyer, who had immediately communicated it to Jean.

By his will, everything he possessed, except for a certain sum set aside to cover a few legacies to old and valued servants, was left to Jean, and with the quaint whimsicality which was characteristic of him he had particularly mentioned: "Beirnfels, the House Of Dreams-Come-True."

The little phrase, with its suggestion of joyous consummation, stabbed her with a sharp thrill of pain. Greeting her, as it did, at the moment when all her hopes of happiness were lying trampled beneath the iron heel of hostile destiny, it seemed to add a last touch of irony to the bitterness of the burden she had to bear.

The House of Dreams-Come-True! In the solitude and silence of her room Jean laughed out loud at the mockery of it! But her breath caught in her throat, sobbingly, and then quite suddenly the merciful, healing tears began to fall, and, laying her head down on her arms, she cried unrestrainedly.

The way to build up a community is for every person in it, who can, to put some money into industries that give the people employment, and push the industries to success. Industries that last all the year round are the best; but those that last part of the year are better than none. The most valuable power on earth is human power, and when it is not employed it is not only lost but it also consumes part of what others earn. Work creates wealth; work sets money in motion; work pays debts; work is the vital power in prosperity, and that town, that community, and that nation whose people are idle, are poor, and poor in proportion to the number that work and the times they work. The greatest earthly blessing to any people is to give them honest, remunerative work.
